

2012 WATER WATCH

Keeping an Eye on Water Resources

District-Wide Conditions for January 17, 2012

The South Florida Water Management District (SFWMD) is issuing the following briefing:

Rainfall levels have been below average during the first few months of the dry season across the District's 16-county region. Most areas of the District have yet to see a drop of rainfall in 2012. However, cooler temperatures and low evapotranspiration rates have allowed water supplies to remain stable.

A drier-than-normal dry season is expected to continue with the effects of the La Niña weather pattern, indicating a potential return to water shortage conditions in the spring. As a result, the region remains under a water shortage warning.

Water Conservation Measures

- South Florida is under the District's Year-Round Landscape Irrigation Rule that limits residential and business landscape irrigation to two or three days per week based on location.
 - Some city and county governments have adopted local ordinances that differ from the District rule and may further limit landscape irrigation. To determine watering days and times in your area, contact your local government or visit www.sfwmd.gov/2days.

- Note: Customers of the West Palm Beach and Lake Worth utilities remain under local orders that limit landscape irrigation to one day per week.
- Permitted water users such as nurseries, agriculture, golf courses and utilities are required to continue following the water use conditions in their permits.
 - Copies of water use permits can be found in the Application/Permit records search online at www.sfwmd.gov/ePermitting.
